THE STUDENTS OF NORTH AMERICA IN RELATION TO THE NON-CHRISTIAN WORLD

The Student Volunteer Movement is primarily a movement, not an organization. True it unites by a common declaration of life purpose a growing company of American and Canadian students who have dedicated their lives to foreign missionary service, but this by no means represents all that the Movement is and does. As a vital force, as a new spirit, as a pervasive influence, its life and activities are far more widely manifested and felt. Regarded in this light and not as a formal and visible organization, it is the most comprehensive student movement of the United States and Canada, because its mission embraces both men and women students, and its field comprises institutions of higher learning throughout these two nations. Its following includes the students of all Christian communions.

The primary and paramount function of the Movement is that of recruiting. It seeks to enroll a sufficient number of well-qualified volunteers to meet the requirements of the Mission Boards of North America. Its well understood purpose also involves the cultivation of the whole range of missionary interest and activity among all classes of students and the leading of the students who are not to become missionaries to recognize, accept and prepare themselves to discharge their responsibility to maintain the missionary enterprise by their advocacy, by their gifts and by their prayers. That it may better realize these two great purposes the Movement seeks to carry forward its work on the one hand in close relationship to the Mission Boards and on the other hand in intimate touch and co-operation with the Student Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association Movements and with other student religious societies.

The quadrennium which has elapsed since the Nashville Convention has been characterized by closer unification of the interests of the Volunteers and non-Volunteers, by marked expansion of the activities of the Movement, by greater intensification of its life, and by a notable increase of momentum in the going forth of its members to their lifework in all parts of the non-Christian world. Among the many developments and achievements, attention is called to a few of the most outstanding and significant.

The best evidence of the efficiency and power of the Student Volunteer Movement is the number of sailed Volunteers. In fact, this is the great test by which the Movement should be judged. The enlisting of Volunteers who will actually go to the front and serve there is its distinctive mission. This in itself is a sufficient reason for the existence of such a movement. Measured by this standard the Movement has steadily gone from strength to strength. At the Toronto Convention in 1902 it was reported that 780 Volunteers had sailed during the preceding four years. In the quadrennium following the Toronto Convention and ending with the Nashville Convention in 1906, 1,000 Volunteers sailed. During the four years which have since elapsed, ending with the Rochester Convention, 1,275 Volunteers have sailed, or 275 more than we were able to report for the quadrennium ending with the Nashville Convention. Thus this Movement is markedly increasing in volume.

It is interesting to note that Volunteers constitute a steadily increasing proportion of the number of men and women sent out by the Mission Boards. This is particularly true of the men and of the unmarried women sent out.

The total number of Volunteers who have sailed under the various Mission Boards since the beginning of the Movement in 1886 is 4,346. Some fifty different communions are represented in the list of sailed Volunteers. They are distributed by countries as follows:

Japan	374
Korea	200
China	1,253
Siam, Laos and Straits Settlements	79
India, Burma and Ceylon	840
Persia	39
Turkish Empire	157
Arabia	21
Philippine Islands	127
Oceania	57
Africa	466
Mexico	133
Central America	28
West Indies	128
South America	266
Latin and Greek Church Countries of Europe	21
Miscellaneous	157
Total	4,346*

* These statistics are doubtless incomplete as the Office of the Movement is constantly discovering the names of volunteers who have sailed but whose going to the field had not been reported.

The question from time to time presents itself, Do the leaders of this Movement press to the front? In answer it is gratifying to state that of the Volunteers who have been traveling secretaries sixty-four have sailed, four have been rejected by the Boards because they lacked necessary qualifications, three are still in course of preparation, two are detained by the Boards for special service and five are at work on the present staff. All the members of the Executive Committee who have been Volunteers have either become missionaries or have applied to the Boards and been detained for missionary service in connection with the home base. No facts could better illustrate the aggressive spirit of the Movement.

Since the Nashville Convention one of the principal developments which, more than anything else, explains the great increase in the number of sailed Volunteers has been the creation of what is known as the Candidates Department. This Department was established to serve as a clearing house between the Volunteers on the one hand and the agencies and fields calling for men on the other hand. S. M. Zwemer consented to defer his return to the mission field for two or three years in order to help establish this Department. He has been ably seconded by W. B. Smith. They have become experts on the great subject of missionary demand and supply. With the co-operation of a strong Candidates Council, composed of secretaries of different Mission Boards, they have been enabled to obtain accurate information as to the present and prospective demand for various kinds of missionary workers in the different mission fields. With the help of the large staff of State, National and International traveling secretaries of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations and of the traveling staff of the Volunteer Movement they have kept in touch with the sources of supply. All of these traveling workers have furnished, as it were, eyes and ears for the Candidates Department in their constant search for workers required by the Boards. Many local secretaries, and also professors in theological, medical and other institutions, have rendered valuable assistance in this important search.

Each year special posters or bulletins have been published and placed by the Department in hundreds of colleges and professional schools in the United States and Canada, thus bringing to the attention of thousands of students the urgent needs of the regular Boards and of other agencies. An enormous correspondence has been conducted with Volunteers and non-Volunteers whose names have been suggested as possible candidates. Many articles have been written for religious periodicals, medical journals and college papers, setting forth definite opportunities for service on the foreign field. Through these and various other means the Candidates Department has enabled the Movement in the past few years to render larger service to the mission fields than in any preceding period of its history. The great increase in the number of sailed Volunteers during the past four years is all the more significant in view of the fact that these years included a period of serious financial depression, and of the further fact that the requirements as to qualifications of many of the Mission Boards have become more exacting. Moreover, the Movement has been steadily increasing the number of Volunteers. In view of the very conservative methods which it employs in its recruiting work the fact that the number of missionary candidates has increased year by year is remarkable. This has afforded the Mission Boards a wider basis for selection, and this in turn has had an important bearing on the quality of approved candidates.

The past four years have been characterized by a growing sense of responsibility on the part of American and Canadian students who are to spend their lives in work on the home field, to sustain those of their fellow-students who are to devote their lives to work in the non-Christian world. The recognition of the fact that the work of Christ at home and abroad is one work was evident at Toronto and even more apparent at Nashville. This has become more and more pronounced, so that in most parts of the student field we find the satisfactory and hopeful spectacle of the students who are to go and the students who are to stay at home standing together unitedly in the common enterprise of world-evangelization. The students who do not volunteer are coming more and more to see that the determining consideration in choosing and fulfilling their lifework should be its helpful bearing on the world plans of Christ. Many of the students who are becoming clergymen regard their parishes not alone or chiefly as a field to be cultivated, but primarily as a force to be wielded on behalf of the whole world. Students who are to become teachers, editors, lawyers, statesmen, jurists, commercial and industrial leaders; in short, who are to become leaders in all important realms of thought and action, are inspired with the ambition to bring all the resources and influence which they have or may command, to bear upon the problem of making the Church in the United States and Canada an adequate base for the proper maintenance of a world-wide war. This change in feeling, attitude and purpose of such large numbers of educated men and women is without doubt one of the most hopeful signs of the time.

Another test of the rising tide of practical missionary interest among students is the increase in their missionary giving. At Nashville it was reported that the students of North America were contributing $80,000. a year to missionary objects. They are now giving $131,000. toward such objects, or an increase in four years of over sixty per cent. There are scores of colleges and schools each supporting entirely or in large part its own representative on the foreign field.

Some of the larger universities have launched special missionary enterprises of their own; for example, the new Yale at Changsha, China, supported by the Yale constituency; the Princeton Association enterprise in Peking, China; the medical missionary establishment in Canton maintained by the University of Pennsylvania; and undertakings like that of Oberlin in the Province of Shansi in China. But by far the larger part of the missionary contributions goes to the Mission Boards of the Church. The students of Yale head the list with their contribution last year of fully $10,000. to missionary objects. Among institutions for women The Misses Masters' School made the largest contribution, having given last year $3,385. Possibly the most notable gift proportionately was that of $1,070. by forty students of the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia at Alexandria. If we limit ourselves strictly to the students who contributed to missionary objects last year, we find that the average contribution was $2.51 per student. This does not take account of amounts which these students raised for missions from members of the faculty and friends, nor of what they may have given through their home churches, but simply what they themselves gave through college channels.

The value of this important result of the work of the Movement lies not so much in the amount of money given as in the influence upon the thought and habits of the students. Tens of thousands of them are thus helped to acquire the habit of systematic and proportionate giving. Large numbers of them who are to become ministers and lay leaders will later influence the churches to which they belong to adopt a plan of supporting one or more missionaries as a result of observing the successful working of the plan of an Association or institution supporting its own representative on the foreign field. Many sons of the wealthy by this experience in their college days catch the idea and form the purpose of supporting missionaries, mission stations, colleges and hospitals. Another great advantage of the plan is that young men and women during their student days become related to the Church agencies which carry on the missionary enterprise. As a result they will be more interested in these agencies and better prepared to co-operate with them. The Movement is thus helping to raise up and train efficient collectors, organizers, and administrators of the auxiliary missionary agencies of the Church. The further fact should not be lost sight of that through financial co-operation with missions many a student has been led to dedicate his life to missionary service.

The past four years have been a record-breaking period in the promotion of mission study among students. In the year preceding the Nashville Convention there were 1,049 mission study classes in institutions of higher learning in the United States and Canada. Last year there were 2,084. In the year before the Nashville Convention the total number engaged in mission study was 12,629. During the past year it was 25,208. It will be seen that the number has doubled in four years. The increase has been greater during the past four years than during the twelve years preceding the Nashville Convention. Moreover, as a result of the wise direction of the mission study work by J. Lovell Murray, the attitude of the leaders in Christian work in the different colleges and seminaries toward the subject of mission study has changed to such an extent that this work is now regarded by most of them to rank with Bible study as one of the two foremost and fundamental Christian activities among students. In a number of institutions the entire student body has been enrolled in voluntary mission study classes. Even where curriculum instruction on the subject of missions is provided, voluntary groups are often formed. For example, at one theological seminary where every student receives curriculum instruction in missions and where there is a missionary lecture foundation as well, thirteen voluntary mission study groups have been formed enrolling nearly all of the students of the seminary.

The quality of mission study class leadership has also markedly improved. This is due partly to the fact that more of the ablest students and professors have been enlisted as teachers, but even more is it traceable to the better training of leaders. The leaders are now usually appointed for a longer period in advance than formerly and therefore have more time to prepare. A larger number of them now receive training at the summer conferences. The normal training class method is more widely employed. Much special literature for leaders has been published. The influence of Dr. T. H. P. Sailer has been most helpful in improving the leadership of the mission study class work. Nothing better illustrates the growing recognition of the vital importance of mission study than the remarkable increase in the number of delegates at student summer conferences who enter the mission study classes in connection with these gatherings. At the men's conferences last year it is reported that of 1,930 delegates nearly 1,900 were in such classes, and it is estimated that including both men's and women's conferences, nearly if not quite ninety per cent. of the total number of delegates registered were enrolled in mission study classes. Reference should also be made to the increasing number of professors who have been related to this work. Last year over 300 college and seminary professors sustained a responsible relation to mission study work either as leaders of classes, teachers of normal groups, or advisors of committees.

Some of the best text-books prepared by the Movement were issued during the past four years. Among those which should be particularly noticed are Zwemer's "Islam: a Challenge to Faith," Barton's "The Unfinished Task," Miss Fiske's "The Word and the World," outline studies on "The Work of the Medical Missionary" by Edwards, and outline studies on "The Apologetic of Modern Missions" by Murray. One of the most useful publications has been the special edition of Brown's "The Foreign Missionary" which has been widely used as a text-book especially by Volunteer Bands. In addition to the books specially prepared for the Movement we have used the text-books prepared by other agencies including the British Student Volunteer Missionary Union, the Young People's Missionary Movement, and the United Study Committee. Besides the new text-books and the revisions of old text-books the Movement has issued a number of new and effective pamphlets which have been largely used in promoting the mission study propaganda and in helping mission study class leaders.

The Mission Study Department of the Movement has been the principal factor in building up splendid missionary libraries in all parts of the student field of North America. It has also had much influence in the enlargement and improvement of curriculum instruction in missions. The indirect influence of this Department in stimulating students to pray for missions, to give to missions, and to work for missions, has been great indeed. Even more vital has been its influence on the offering of many lives for foreign service. Testimonies to this effect are constantly coming to our attention. A recent letter from a Southern college, where there were 200 students among whom were no Volunteers, stated that as a result of a mission study class on "The Unfinished Task" seven students, including the leader of the class, volunteered for foreign missions. It is generally recognized that the mission study work now conducted in the colleges and professional schools has had very much to do with preparing intending missionaries for their life service on the foreign field. True it is that it has served to steady and strengthen the missionary purpose of almost every Volunteer. Moreover, the influence and importance of mission study in widening the horizon, enriching the lives, purifying the ambitions, and enlarging and shaping the life purposes of students cannot be easily overstated.

In some respects the indirect results of the work of the Student Volunteer Movement have been quite as remarkable as what it has accomplished directly in the way of carrying out its distinctive purposes. These indirect results have been accomplished without definite aim or plan. First among them should be mentioned the influence of the Movement on the religious life of the institutions of higher learning throughout the United States and Canada. The propaganda of this Movement has given to the Christian students of our day the world vision and made real to them the brotherhood of man. In appealing to students to meet the needs of the non-Christian world, it has sounded out the call to serve in such a compelling manner as to fire a multitude of college men and college women with the passion for helpfulness. In emphasizing Christ's desire to extend his Kingdom over the entire world, it has at the same time helped students to acknowledge His sway and to give Him His rightful place as Lord over their own lives. In summoning students to world conquest, it has appealed to the heroic and self-sacrificing in men, and has enlisted the students of our day as of no previous generation to lives of unselfish devotion and self-discipline. As a result of its activities, more students to-day have forgotten or lost themselves in the great cause of Christ than at any time in the history of colleges. Thus this Movement has dealt a powerful blow to some of the gravest perils of modern student life in North America—the perils of selfishness, of narrowness, of materialism and worldly ideals, of extravagance and luxury, of softness and love of ease.

By bringing vividly and thoroughly before students the marvelous individual and social transformations wrought by the Living Christ in the midst of the most discouraging and difficult conditions of the non-Christian world, the Movement has furnished to inquiring and thoughtful students present-day, satisfying evidences of the vitality and conquering power of the Christian faith. As an apologetic factor and force its influence has become enormous. The literature and conferences of the Movement, as well as the practices and appeals of its members and secretaries, have done much to lead students into the formation of the most helpful devotional habits. One comes to realize best what a vast contribution this Movement is making to the ethical and spiritual life of our institutions by contrasting them with those student communities either on this continent or in other parts of the world which have not yet been exposed to the full stream of its life and power.

The work and influence of detained Volunteers should be mentioned among the indirect results of the Movement. It is well known that quite a large number of the Volunteers have been prevented from pressing to the front, owing to the fact that they could not meet some of the requirements of the Mission Boards, or owing to personal or family problems and difficulties. Some of these Volunteers by persistent and prayerful effort might have overcome their obstacles and have gone out to the foreign field, but a careful study has convinced us that a large majority of those who have been detained in recent years have been hindered through providential causes. Those Volunteers who know beyond question that in deferring temporarily or permanently entering upon foreign missionary service they are following the clearly indicated will of God, constitute one of the most fruitful classes spiritually to be found on the home field. Many of them are actively engaged in the work of the Christian ministry, especially in frontier churches and in the needier metropolitan and suburban parishes. Others are engaged in educational work in connection with home mission institutions, especially in the most needy fields of the United States and Canada. A few are medical missionaries among the Indians. Some are secretaries of foreign Mission Boards and auxiliary agencies. Some are secretaries of Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations, and yet others are engaged in settlement work or other Christian social betterment activities. Detained Volunteers are also found here and there among the laymen who are accomplishing large things for the Kingdom. Such providentially-hindered Volunteers, who devote themselves with enthusiasm to the work of developing a strong Christian base in North America for the worldwide operations of the Church, are as truly helping to realize the high aims of the Movement as are those whom God permits to carry out their purpose on the foreign field.

Time will doubtless show that the most significant missionary development on the home field during the last four years was the inauguration of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Its founder has borne testimony that he received his vision of the necessity and practicability of such a Movement while attending the Nashville Convention. This led later to the calling of the notable interdenominational prayer-meeting of November, 1906, held in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City (in commemoration of the Centennial of the Williams College Haystack Prayer-meeting), at which the Layman's Missionary Movement was formally organized. The progress of this Movement during the three years which have elapsed has been truly wonderful. In Canada it has become both a national and a world force, and is rapidly coming into like prominence in the United States. It has been transplanted to Great Britain and bids fair to develop in the near future into an effective agency there and in other parts of the world. It has adopted as its watchword that of the Student Volunteer Movement—The Evangelization of the World in this Generation. This Movement, in relating the aggressive laymen to the missionary plans of the Church, is destined to affect profoundly the realization of the aims of the Volunteer Movement. In fact, the Laymen's Movement is the complement of the Student Volunteer Movement. While it will inevitably accomplish other large ends, its greatest service will be that of making possible the sending out of a sufficient number of Volunteers to accomplish the world's evangelization in our day.

The Student Volunteer Movement of the United States and Canada, as well as the corresponding Movements in Great Britain, on the Continent, in Australasia and in South Africa, has through the medium of the World's Student Christian Federation, indirectly extended its influence among universities and colleges in all parts of the world. In these days as a result of the work of the Federation all parts of the vast student world have been brought into intimate relation to each other and it is now possible as at no time in the past for the students of one country to influence those of other lands. That this influence is as a rule exercised unconsciously does not change the fact. If the Student Movement of any country, or even a band of students in any college, does a thoroughly creditable work, the example is sure to become widely contagious, even in parts of the world where least expected. It is not strange, therefore, to find many examples, both near and far, of the effect on the students of other nations of the missionary consecration and activity of faithful groups of students of different Canadian and American colleges. In this connection we would call appreciative attention to the fact that the past quadrennium has witnessed the most remarkable series of student missionary conferences ever held—those of Nashville, Liverpool, Halle, and Cape Town. Even more notable, from the point of view of unifying the Christian students of the world for the purposes of worldwide conquest, were the conferences of the World's Student Christian Federation held in Tokyo in 1907 and in Oxford in 1909. Recent years, therefore, as no preceding period, have seen a coming together of the students of the world and a recognition of their common responsibility for the world's evangelization.

Largely under the influence of sailed Volunteers engaged in educational missionary work and in the work of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations on the foreign field, the Student Volunteer idea has been planted and developed among the Christian students in different parts of the Orient. A genuine missionary spirit has manifested itself among them in certain centers, and the day is not far distant when in each principal mission field there will be a Student Volunteer Movement. While there have been encouraging illustrations of missionary consecration among Indian and Japanese Christian students, the most remarkable examples in recent years have been afforded by students of China. Particularly notable are the Volunteer Bands in Peking University and in Shantung University. In the latter over one hundred students and in the former over two hundred have dedicated their lives to Christian work, notwithstanding the fact that in so-called secular pursuits they would receive far larger salaries. When all the difficulties are considered these are the two most remarkable offerings of student lives to the cause of the world's evangelization which have been made in recent years by any universities in the world. They suggest the boundless possibilities of the native Christian student communities of the Orient when the volunteer idea lays hold of them powerfully under the influence of the Spirit of missions.

Some consider that the greatest by-product of the Student Movement is its far-reaching influence in the direction of Christian co-operation, federation and union. The Student Volunteers of North America and Great Britain, who have been bound together so closely in this Movement during their college days, have, since reaching the mission fields, regarded it as both a duty and a privilege to continue to plan and work together. Now that the number of sailed Volunteers from these countries is over 5,500, or about one-third of the total missionary body, it is but natural to find them exerting a large unifying influence. That that influence will soon become irresistible, as their number continues to increase, is perfectly evident, and when they succeed in realizing their present visions of co-operation and union, the result will be more than the equivalent of adding thousands of new missionaries.

As we, the members and friends of the Volunteer Movement, enter upon another period of achievement, on what points of policy should we place chief emphasis? The Watchword—the Evangelization of the World in this Generation—must be given a larger place in the life of the Movement and of the Church. The Watchword was adopted by the North American Movement, as well as by the movements in some of the other nations, after prolonged consideration and under the highest spiritual influences. It has come to mean more and more in the life of the Movement from year to year. It has grown steadily in favor both among the Volunteers and other Christian students, and has been accepted increasingly by leaders of the Church and recently by large numbers of the best informed and most deeply interested laymen. It has appealed profoundly to thoughtful Christians of different nationalities and different communions. Christians everywhere are coming to recognize that there is a responsibility resting upon each generation of Christians to make the Gospel fully known to the non-Christians of their own generation. They know of no reason which commends itself to their judgment and conscience why they should not make a resolute and sustained effort to make Christ known to every section of the human race now living; and the conviction ever deepens upon them that this great claim of the non-Christian world upon them can be fulfilled if the Church of to-day will but give itself to the task.

The history of the Movement shows that there are great advantages in having such a watchword as a commanding ideal. The fact that it is a startling word, calling for explanation, compels attention and stimulates inquiry and thought regarding Christ's great program for the world. To get Christians to reflect upon such matters as the vastness of the task and the urgency of the situation is most desirable. If earnest Christians will think this matter through, it is certain that the subject will lay powerful hold upon their convictions and profoundly influence their practices. Among the best propagators of the Watchword have been its critics. The faithful criticisms of men like Professor Warneck have had great influence in leading people to investigate the meaning of the Watchword and as a result many have been led to adopt it. It brings home to each Christian his responsibility in a way which causes him to recognize it and to accept it.

The Watchword emphasizes the pressing and overwhelming urgency of the missionary situation and appeal. It reminds us constantly that our problem is a living one—one which living men have to face on behalf of men now living. It does not present an academic problem but one which is personal and pressing. It keeps us asking ourselves the question, 'Are we doing all that we can to reach our living brothers?' It is a stirring reminder that our plan must embrace the whole world and that we must act without delay. None recognize so keenly the necessity and value of this aspect of the Watchword as do many of the Volunteers who are now at the front face to face with the crisis which confronts the Church on every hand. The Watchword is a vast and bold challenge which appeals, therefore, with special force to strong natures. It lays hold of and calls out the strongest elements in men. It has discovered to the Church the attraction which hard things have for young men. The Watchword is helping to raise up and develop missionary strategists and statesmen. Those who have thought deeply upon the requirements of such a watchword have come to see that the wisest strategy and the largest statesmanship are indispensable to its realization.

Contrary to the impression of some the Watchword is promoting thoroughness. Its advocates clearly see that the task to be accomplished is so vast and so difficult that nothing short of the most thorough methods and processes will avail. They recognize that the principal human factor in the undertaking is the Native Church and therefore they are emphasizing the development of the native arm of the service. None have made stronger deliverances against superficiality and in support of thorough work than old Volunteers who have accepted the Watchword. The official statements of the Volunteer Movement on this very subject, the mission study propaganda, the insistence by leaders of the Movement on the most thorough preparation of Volunteers, the fact that such a large proportion of Volunteers devote themselves to educational and training work, the constant emphasis at Volunteer Conventions on the formation of right intellectual and devotional habits, and the insistent appeal of leaders to the strongest students to devote themselves to missionary service—these are among the many evidences that the Volunteer Movement under the influence of its Watchword is a great exponent of thoroughness.

Many are inspired by the thought that the realization of the Watchword will give us a larger Christ and a larger Gospel. They believe that each race of mankind has some fresh contribution of thought, character, and experience to make, and that only as they have had opportunity to learn of Christ and to receive Him can they make these contributions. How desirable it is that the Church should avail itself as soon as possible of all that nations as yet spiritually unborn are able to interpret of Christ's excellencies and to communicate of His power.

Increasing experience shows that the Watchword exerts a profound spiritual influence. If it is to be realized there must be not so much a change in missionary methods and policy as a change in the lives of the Christians of our day. The emphasis, therefore, which the Movement places must not be so much on the number of workers, or on the increase in gifts, or on the power of human strategy, as on the sufficiency and availability of the Divine resources. To give chief prominence to the matter of numbers and quantity is to neglect the most important thing of all, the hiding of our power. Such a watchword inevitably drives its adherents to the Divine sources. It makes convincingly plain to them and to all, who come under its influence, that we must have a great accession of superhuman power if the Gospel is to be carried in purity to all men in our day.

If arguments like these influenced students and others years ago to adopt the Watchword, with what cumulative force should they appeal to us to-day, in view of the special urgency of the situation throughout the non-Christian world and God's unmistakable summons to us to make a great and adequate advance. The time has come for us to urge upon Christians everywhere the acceptance of this Watchword as a personal watchword.

The practical question with us as delegates and leaders is how to make the Watchword a real power in our own lives, because if it dominates us it is sure to lay powerful hold upon others through us. We should continue to read and to reflect upon the various discussions of the Watchword and of all that is involved in its realization. We should welcome criticism and promote discussion. We should constantly be expounding the Watchword to others and urging them to accept it. We should plan and act as though we had, which as a matter of fact we do have, but one generation in which to accomplish all that we do in the way of making Christ known to the world. Far too many students and professors are planning and acting as though they had two or more generations in which to accomplish their life work. Rather let each one so plan and so work that, if a sufficient number of students and professors would do likewise, Christ might readily be made known to all people in our day. This means that we must regulate our manner of life in such a way as the realization of such a watchword requires. This will affect profoundly our habits as to the use of time, energy, money, opportunity, and influence. It will determine all of our important decisions. It will be an effective call to constant consecration, discipline and sacrifice. Intercession will become a great reality with us, especially prayer for members of the Movement now at the front, prayer for the thrusting forth of those now ready to sail, prayer for those in preparation, prayer for the quickening and energizing of the workers on the home field. If the Watchword is to continue to be a living power with us we must renew from time to time the sense of the reality, urgency and personal responsibility involved in it. There have been times in the life of each one who has taken this Watchword when it deeply moved and influenced him. Our concern must be that of making this a more nearly constant experience. What idea can possess us which will be more potent, more purifying and more inspiring? May God keep the Christian students of our day from drifting into lives of mediocrity or lives lacking the enthusiasm of this world-conquering idea.

By far the most important concern of the Volunteer Movement and of its friends is to augment greatly the number of well-equipped Volunteers who can in the immediate or near future press out to the mission fields. The present demand for such workers is greater than at any time in the past and is sure to increase in the years just before us. Without doubt the student field of the United States and Canada at the beginning of the present decade is to be subjected to a heavier pressure to furnish missionaries and other helpers for the establishment of Christ's Kingdom abroad than it has thus far felt. This pressure is being brought to bear from two sides. In the first place, from the side of the non-Christian world itself. The present student generation is facing an absolutely unique world situation. There have been other times when in one or a few portions of the world the Church was confronted with a grave crisis, but never before has there been such a world-wide synchronizing of crises. To-day throughout the entire Far East, in all the principal parts of the Near East, such as Turkey and Persia, in Southern Asia, in the East Indies, throughout the larger part of the African continent, and even in parts of Latin America, the Christian Church faces nothing less than an acute and momentous crisis. This crisis can be met only by the sending out of a far larger number than are now forthcoming of thoroughly capable and well furnished missionaries.

On the home side we are subject to the growing pressure of the expanding ability of the Church to send forth an army of workers, primarily as a result of the uprising of Christian men in the Laymen's Missionary Movement, not to speak of the activities of the Forward Movements in some of the Christian communions and of the very effective work of the Young People's Missionary Movement in the Sunday-schools and among the large numbers of other young people. The burden of responsibility thus imposed upon our Movement and upon all the Christian forces at work in the North American student field is such as to justify in itself the holding of the Rochester Convention, and as to require a great enlargement in the plans of the Volunteer Movement, and also to call for the united and hearty co-operation of all who are in any way concerned with the full Christlike outreach of our universities, colleges and seminaries. The Christian Church has the right to look to us with confidence at such a time. Though the Volunteer Movement and the related Association Movements will be tested as never before, we cannot but believe that they will not be found wanting in this hour of supreme and inspiring opportunity and solemn responsibility.

The urgency of the situation must not tempt us or in any way deflect us from the well established policy of the Movement to secure missionary candidates who are thoroughly well qualified. On the contrary the demand of the present time is for missionaries of the highest order of ability. In most countries the problems confronting the missionary are so difficult and so important as to demand missionaries of exceptional ability and preparation. Never was the need of constructive missionary statesmanship and of missionary strategy so imperative. The growing movements of co-operation, federation, and union on the foreign field will be carried to a successful issue only by men possessing the gifts of true leadership. The Volunteer Movement in its propaganda for recruits, while earnestly seeking to increase greatly the number of Volunteers, must therefore concern itself even more with the questions pertaining to their qualifications and thorough preparation. As in the past, chief stress will be placed on securing men of well-established faith and of genuine Christian character.

To meet the great demands of the present unparalleled situation calls for enlargement in every direction. It is evident that the staff of traveling secretaries should be doubled. This is necessary if all the important educational institutions are to receive a visit each year. It is essential also if the Movement is to do a more intensive work in each institution, and without doubt this is needed. Only in this way can we hope to secure a sufficient number of Volunteers to ensure the number required for sailing after the thorough sifting processes of the Boards have been employed. The highly productive work of the Candidates Department must be further developed. It is the function of this Department to help the Boards find young men and young women who can sail in the near and not in the distant future. This is a most difficult work and requires the expenditure of far more time than is usually realized. The work of this Department must be brought through frequent conferences and in other ways into even closer relation to that of the Candidates Departments of the different Mission Boards.

Splendid as has been the increase in the number of mission study classes, there must be a very great enlargement of the enrolment in mission study. This is entirely feasible. The reasons which have influenced 25,000 students now in mission study classes to devote themselves to such studies apply with equal force to five-fold this number of their fellow students. In no other way can we better help to supply the conditions which will enable students of our day to discover their life relation to the extension of Christ's Kingdom. Mission study does much to make possible safe and sound missionary decisions. The Volunteer Band organization and life need to be strengthened. A careful study has made plain that the institutions which have been furnishing continuously the largest number of satisfactory Volunteers are those in which there have been progressive, vital and active Volunteer Bands. The history of the Student Volunteer Union of Great Britain enforces the same lesson. Unfortunately we have allowed the mission study classes in some institutions to take the place of the old time Volunteer Bands. This they can never do. Both agencies are indispensable.

Possibly the best recruiting ground for missionaries is the sixteen or more student summer and winter conferences of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations and also the still more numerous district, metropolitan and state missionary conferences. These conferences furnish an atmosphere favorable for the discovery of the will of God and also release influences in the lives of students which prompt them to Christlike obedience to the will of God. It may be questioned, however, whether we have begun to utilize the possibilities of these gatherings as places for the dedication of lives to the world-embracing plans of Christ. At the same time conservatism should be exercised that students may volunteer only after the most thorough and prayerful consideration and not as a result of the enthusiasm of the hour. The leaders of these conferences and of the different college delegations may well give more thought and prayer to this most highly-multiplying work, that of raising up leaders for the missionary forces.

Christian college and seminary presidents and professors and school masters should also recognize and accept a larger measure of responsibility for recruiting laborers for the fully ripe harvest fields of the non-Christian world. They are in a position to do more to influence life decisions than any other class of workers. They have the largest influence with the students. Their counsel is regarded as impartial and unselfish. When we see what individual professors here and there are doing as a result of setting apart systematically each week a few hours for the definite purpose of receiving students to talk over with them their life purposes and plans, we cannot but wish that more of them would adjust their professional and administrative duties so as to admit of their devoting themselves more largely to this most productive and enduring work. We believe the day is near at hand when more of our leading educators will come to regard the missionary contribution of the colleges as their crowning glory.

The deepest lesson of all to be learned is the Christ-appointed lesson that the real secret underlying the adequate supply of truly qualified workers is the work of intercession. Anything which the delegates of the Rochester Convention and the other friends of this Movement can do to make prayer for laborers a vital practice in their own lives and to communicate the prayer passion to others will more directly and more potently than anything else result in the actual distribution throughout the fields of the non-Christian world of the workers of God's own appointment. Wherever else we may fail, therefore, let us not permit ourselves to fail at this point.

The time has come when the Volunteer Movement must widen its program so as to do more to improve the opportunities for advancing the interests of Christ's Kingdom which present themselves in the non-Christian world to those who are not missionaries. Such opportunities are multiplying on every hand. Some of them are quite as important as the opportunities presented by the regular missionary career. How important it is, for example, that the men who are to fill the positions in the diplomatic and consular service and in various departments of the civil service of our own and other Christian countries, shall be men of genuine Christian character and men who by word and work will not only safeguard the missionary interests committed to their charge, but will also throw the full weight of their influence on the side of Jesus Christ and His program. When we think of the great service recently rendered by such Christian civilians as Sir Andrew Fraser in India, Sir Mortimer Durand in Persia, Judge Wilfley in China and Mr. R. S. Miller, Jr., in Japan, we recognize the possibilities before the young men who devote their lives with Christian purpose to the service of the Government in other lands.

The educated men who relate themselves to the Army and Navy are from time to time placed in positions where their influence on non-Christian peoples of other races will do much either to strengthen or weaken the influence of Christianity. The attitude and actions of Admiral Watson while in the Far East is a good example. In this day of commercial and industrial expansion an increasing number of our most ambitious and enterprising young men will be scattered over different sections of the foreign mission field to help exploit the material resources or to extend the movements of commerce. In some cases such men, if they have the missionary purpose and spirit, can do as much as missionaries themselves to advance the interests of Christianity, especially among classes of men not reached by the ordinary missionary methods. A great many of our best engineering students, and students connected with other departments of applied science, will go forth to lands like China, Africa and Turkey in the near future to help in their industrial development. If all these went with the determination to make their influence tell for Christ they would greatly advance the interests of Christian missions. An increasing number of college men and women, especially the sons of the wealthy and well-to-do classes, are making the tour around the world at the close of their college course. The visits of some of these students have been a benediction to the missionaries and native Christian workers and their living witness an evidence of Christianity to the non-Christians with whom they have mingled, while others have concealed their Christian profession and abandoned their Christian practices, thus weakening the hands of the missionary movement.

Unquestionably the greatest opportunity before the students of North America who do not contemplate becoming regular missionaries is that which presents itself in the realm of education. There is a large and growing demand for American and Canadian students, both men and women, to go out to different part of the non-Christian world to teach in Government schools and colleges and in other non-missionary institutions. Scores of our fellow-students are now holding such positions in the Philippines, in Japan, in China, and in Latin America. The demand for such workers will increase; hundreds will probably be required within the next few years. Such teachers outside of the class room, in the several hours each day at their disposal, have a wonderful opportunity to expound and illustrate the teaching of Christianity among those over whom they have won such large influence in their regular work and to help the missionaries in many other directions. The teacher in all of these countries wields an enormous influence over the youth.

One opportunity, which comes to most of us but which many have overlooked, is that which comes with the large and increasing number of students among us who have come from Oriental and other non-Christian lands. These students are to furnish a vastly disproportionate share of the future leaders of their respective nations. They come among us as strangers and are peculiarly susceptible to the offices of kindness. They are at the most plastic period in life. Who can estimate the great good which could be accomplished by our carrying on among them a campaign of real friendship, remembering that the highest office of friendship is to help our friends in the deepest things of life. These foreign students are in a position to do more than some missionaries to extend the domain of Christ among their countrymen.

If the great number of new Volunteers, so imperatively demanded, are to be forthcoming; if the large and growing stream of Christian students going forth to the non-Christian world into the so-called secular enterprises are to improve the opportunities which await them; and if the type of Christianity which both of these classes bear from us is to be really worth propagating, then the delegates of this Convention and all those who have at heart the spiritual welfare of the universities, colleges and schools of North America must give more thought and attention to making the conditions in them favorable for this great expansion of pure Christianity. In a word, if there are to be such great results witnessed abroad, there must be supplied a commensurate cause at home. The centers of learning of the United States and Canada must become more than at present abounding centers of Christianity in its purest and therefore most highly propagating form. This means that campaigns of evangelism must be waged with wisdom and power in all our principal student communities. We note with appreciation the extensive plans which have been made for presenting the Living Christ to college men at many universities during the coming term. The number of men adapted to lead in this life-giving work must be multiplied.

Special efforts must be put forth through apologetic lectures and apologetic writings by men of learning and devotion, who can gain and hold the confidence of students, to establish firmly in the essentials of the Christian faith those who are to propagate that faith abroad as well as those who are to maintain it at home. The present comparatively superficial knowledge which many Christian college students have of the foundation facts of the Christian faith does not qualify them for spreading triumphantly the Christian faith in the lands of the other religions. The Christian students must also acquire an experimental knowledge of the power of Jesus Christ to give them victory day by day over their temptations. It is such first-hand knowledge of the Living Christ which will give them a Gospel to proclaim with unshakable conviction. They must be helped to develop a character of Christlike sympathy and love so that, as they go forth to non-Christian lands, they will be able to win the hearts of the people by kindness as well as to persuade their minds by truth, for this has always been the key with which to open the doors for the wide spread of the Christian faith. Every college should send forth men of saintliness and might. The present day calls for men of power, pre-eminently for men of spirituality. To propagate a super-human Gospel necessitates workers who are under the control of a Super-human Power.

There is need also of sounding out in every college the stern call to self-denial. Men influenced by the growing tendency to ways of extravagance, pleasure-seeking indulgence and slackness among the students of North America will not conquer the Hinduism, Mohammedanism and materialism of Asia. Nothing short of entering into fellowship with Christ Himself in the life of daily self-denial will generate truly world-conquering power. Great also is the demand today on every mission field for men of heroic mould. We must look to our schools and colleges to supply them. If we can help the students there to face courageously the subtle perils and evils of modern college life and to win the victory over their own spirits, we may confidently expect to see these same men meet victoriously every foe which awaits them at the front. Our Christian Student Movements must also abound more fully with the spirit of unselfish service. Those who are to devote their lives as ministers or laymen to the service of their fellows must not only catch the spirit of such devotion during student days but must also preserve it by actually engaging in helpful effort among those within the range of their influence. There is something strangely inconsistent in studying and planning to make Christ known and obeyed in distant lands and not to be concerned about extending His sway among those within our college walls and among those before our college gates.

Above all, the college men and college women throughout our whole field must be led to surrender themselves wholly to Jesus Christ as Lord and to let Him determine their life decisions and dominate them in every relationship. The great question which must be pressed insistently upon them is not the question of whether or not they will become missionaries, not the relative claims of the home and foreign fields, but the one crucial, all-important question whether or not they will yield to Christ His rightful place as the Lord and Master of their lives. In proportion as the students of our day are influenced to answer affirmatively and whole-heartedly this question of questions will be the realization of the sublime purpose of the Volunteer Movement—to give to all men in our day an adequate opportunity to know and to receive the Living Christ.

LIST OF SAILED VOLUNTEERS

In the following tables are the names of Student Volunteers who have been reported to the Office of the Student Volunteer Movement as having reached the mission field during the years 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1909. They have gone out as the representatives of more than fifty different missionary agencies.

SAILED VOLUNTEERS FOR 1906

In the table abbreviations have been used as follows: B = Bible Institute, C = College, H = Hospital, M = Medical College, N = Normal School, S = Academy, Collegiate Institute or Seminary, T = Theological, Trs = Missionary and Bible Training School, U = University, v = volunteered at.
